Chapter 2 by Glowpy-Druglord

Arcane was wounded, she was in agony and she could not retreat into her Gem. She staggered onto a beach where she noticed a temple, clutching her arm, pale blood trickling down her

She heard footsteps and she weakly raised her hand to summon her Gem spell book forth. It hurt to do so, and she quickly ripped off some words and threw them onto the ground. A Gem wolf appeared in front of her as she collapsed helplessly. She had no voice of her own, Yellow Diamond ripped it from her very throat. She looked up at a small boy with his shield drawn and a Gem with her whips out in her hands. The wolf snarled savagely, stepping in front of her. Arcane's eyes glowed and they matched the wolf so she could speak.

"Are you here to end me?" she demanded. "If you are, make it quick."

"Who are you?" the boy asked, backing away from the wolf that snapped its jaws at him.

"My name is Arcane, I am an Emerald. I used to work for the diamonds until I met Rose Quartz and her renegade Pearl. I did not take part in the rebellion, but I supported it with my spells. The Diamonds discovered my treachery and banished me here. They cracked my gems and I cannot retreat into them to heal my body. I have no healing powers." She had no strength to keep her head up anymore and she let it fall on the ground. The wolf vanished with a poof and she was left bleeding on the sand.
